

For Immediate Release
January 10, 2017

Contact: Hal Singer
(703) 298-0182
Hal.singer8@gmail.com

GW Institute of Public Policy Senior Fellow Hal Singer Leads New Forbes.com Tech Policy Forum

“Washington Bytes” contributors span the political spectrum and offer a wide-ranging set of views and issue expertise

Today, Hal Singer, Senior Fellow at George Washington University’s Institute of Public Policy, launched “Washington Bytes,” which will be hosted by Forbes.com.

Washington Bytes will serve as a forum for a diverse set of knowledgeable experts to debate and discuss the top technology and communications policy issues at play in the Nation’s Capital. The forum is intended to attract new ideas and fresh thinking from across the tech community regarding policies that impact the digital economy and its citizens.

“The idea is to bring together lots of smart people with diverse views under one roof to see if we can forge a consensus on the big tech issues of the day,” explains Singer.

Washington Bytes will launch will eleven contributors, who are affiliated with some of the top academic institutions and think tanks in the United States, and who possess expertise on issues ranging from broadband regulation to spectrum policy to cybersecurity and everything in between.

Washington Bytes (@WashingtonBytes) contributors include:

- Johannes M. Bauer, Professor in the Department of Media and Information at Michigan State University and Director of Special Projects at the Quello Center for Media and Information Policy
- Charles M. Davidson, Director of the Advanced Communications Law and Policy Institute (ACLP) at New York Law School
- Andy Gavil, Professor of Law at Howard University
- Gabe Horowitz, Vice President for the Economic Program at Third Way
- Sally Hubbard, Senior Editor of The Capitol Forum
- Gus Hurwitz, Assistant Professor of Law at Nebraska College of Law and a visiting scholar at the American Enterprise Institute’s Center for Internet, Communications, and Technology Policy
- Dan Lyons, Associate Professor at Boston College Law School a visiting scholar at the American Enterprise Institute’s Center for Internet, Communications, and Technology Policy
- Andrea Renda, Adjunct Professor at Luiss Guido Carli University in Rome, Regulatory Fellow at the Kenan Institute for Ethics and a Senior Research Fellow at the Centre for European Policy Studies
- Robert Seamans, Ph.D., Associate Professor at New York University’s Stern School of Business
- Hal Singer, Ph.D., Principle at Economists Inc. and Senior Fellow at George Washington University’s Institute of Public Policy
- Bret Swanson, President of Entropy Economics, visiting scholar at the American Enterprise Institute’s Center for Internet, Communications, and Technology Policy and scholar at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce Foundation

Please visit the Washington Bytes website for more information:

<http://www.forbes.com/sites/washingtonbytes/>

About the GW Institute of Public Policy:

The George Washington Institute of Public Policy (GWIPP) serves as a university-wide nexus for faculty and graduate students engaging in research on important public policy issues. We also play a unique dual role among policy research institutes in the United States.

Our team of research faculty engage in funded research on a variety of domestic issues. Current areas of emphasis include state and local fiscal policy, urban and regional economic development, active living research, the role of federal statistics in monitoring U.S. economic activity, housing policy, the economics of retirement, workforce development in the 21st century, and social welfare policy.